Abstract

Abstract: English 395 will focus on in-depth research and writing on the civil rights movement at the University of Miami against the background of racial turbulence in the larger community. The struggle raised new and difficult ethical issues regarding responses to situations of radical change and stress. Students will collect information from the archives of local newspapers and campus publications and will interview and video tape participants, recording their personal narratives and reflections. The final study will, we hope, be a valuable community resource on this historical period.
