Abstract

This request for funding from the Arsht Research on Ethics and Community Grants is intended to support the development of an innovative research and publishing project and the development of traditional and digital photographic exhibit spaces that will be established in the School of Education's Dunspaugh-Dalton Community and Educational Well-Being Research Center. The overall project is based on the Ethics of Care model developed by the American philosopher and educator, Nel Noddings, one which we believe is consistent with the vision of the Ethics Center and the grants supported by Arsht program.
